About the Author

This quick representation of the stage was created in around ten minutes and could form the basis of a much more complex model or just be used to visualise design concepts in early development.

To create the Proscenium Opening I can just create another wall and inset a "Door" which will be a structural opening of 11200mm x 7200mm.

In Vectorworks 2015 it became possible to create complex wall shapes by using the new rectangle mode for drawing walls. Walls will automatically join with adjacent walls and holding the Alt key will remove sections already drawn.

Dennis Hart is a renowned theatre designer with over three decades of experience in the industry. His award-winning designs have graced stages around the world, and he has been instrumental in training countless theatre professionals.
