

We Are Not Eaten By Yaks: An Accidental Adventure

In 2007, two young women from the UK set off on an adventure to hike in the Himalayas. They had no idea that their trip would turn into a life-changing experience.

For one thing, they weren't prepared for the altitude. They quickly learned that hiking at high altitudes is not for the faint of heart. The air is thin, the sun is strong, and the wind is relentless. But they persevered, and they eventually made it to their destination, the Everest Base Camp.

Along the way, they met a variety of interesting people. They stayed with a family of yak herders, who taught them about their way of life. They met a group of trekkers from all over the world, who shared their stories and their dreams. And they met a young Tibetan monk, who taught them about the importance of compassion.
